Marriage Notes for Keziah Money and Stephen Tunnell:

The account from Nicholas Money Tunnel says they had 10 children (1 girl and 9 boys):

The girl was the eldest one of the children. Her name was Nancy. The boys were named James, John, Luther, William, Nicholes Money, Wesley, Robert, Steven, and Perrie. (A couple of the boys, she has called by their middle names – perhaps that is what she had heard them called, as they were her great uncles. She also did not mention David; possibly because he died quite young and she would not have known of him). These boys all became ministers of the Gospel except Wesley and Nicholes – who were very religious, however, and good Church workers, and all ways held family prayer in their homes, allso reading a chapter from the Bible at bed time and at mornings – singing gospel himms.

Notes for Nicholas Money Tunnell:
From the Personal family account of Nicholas Money Tunnel:

Nickoles bought a 160 acher track of land in Morgan County, Illinois, just over the line from Greene County (today, on the road to Jacksonville, Ill. as you go from Richwood), where he settled and was one of the first settlers in Morgan County. His boys choped logs to build them a house, and he and his boys built a two room house (two large rooms) of 20 foot logs – some of them were 3 ft wide – so my mother told me. Just two large rooms with a fier place in each room in the center of the room with large arches made of sod. When the house was all done but the flues, he went to Manchester to trade and there he met a very prettie woman, who was there with her brother-in-law and his wife. They were there trading.

So, also, was Nicholes Tunnel good at all his work. His mother was a partial invilid when he was a boy, so he helped her to do all her work in the house, and when she was not able to work, he even did all the house work. He also was a good farmer and fairly good carpenter and handy man, generaly.

Notes for Martha Jones:

From Personal family account of Nicholas Money Tunnel:

When Martha was a young lady, she was very lovely. She had large dark blue eyes, long black hair, and was very fair. She had many beaus. She was a neat little woman, 5 ft. & 2 in. tall, and a very good cook and all around good worker.

Martha married a man named Alexander Watt (Irish). He owned a miller and ground flour and meal. The meal was nearly as fine as flour. He was Irish. He had curly black hair. Two girls were born to this union – Luvenia Watt and Permealie Watt. In five years, when Permealie was near infant, John Watt died of flux. Baby Permealie died, too, of the same disease. Martha went home to her father.

In the mill, with her husband (who had died), a "partner" in the mill was a young man of great strength, but not so tall as some of his brothers who were 6 ft. 7 in. and very strong. His name was Joshua Wilcox. He was English. He courted Martha (Jones) Watt and asked her to marry him. So they married and were the parents of one boy – Merion Wilcox, and one girl – Margret Wilcox. They were yet very small when Joshua took typhoid fever and died. My grandmother was left a young widow a second time. Her brother-in-law and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilcox, took her and her 3 children in to their house.

The cholera broke out in Kentucky, where they lived, and they got on a boat and came up the river to Beardstown, Illinois. The cholera broke out in that place, being brought there by some one on a boat. A neighbor came to Jim Wilcox's and begged him and his wife to go with her and help her take care of her husband and son, both of whom had it and were very bad off. Jim's wife wouldn't go but said Jim and Martha better go. They concluded to go. So each took a big chunk of assafida, tied it up in a rag and strung it around their necks and kept it in their mouths nearly all the time. They stayed there nearly all night. The boy died, but the man got well.

Jim and Martha went home, changed clothes in the smokehouse and burned them. All of them quickly got ready and went to the country, where they all lived in a tent. This takes us back to the meeting and subsequent marriage of Martha Jones Watt Wilcox and Nicholas Money Tunnel.

The Tunnels were building the fier places and Nicholas was afraid he couldn't turn the arches right so Martha said she knew how, as she had helped her folks to build theirs. So, she laid the arches of the big fierplaces in the new Tunnel home. There were two large rooms made of twenty foot logs, with punching floors and clapboard roofs and two big fierplaces, and a middle door and two outside doors and 3 windows in a room. This house was 20 miles from Jacksonville, located in Morgan County, just across the Greene County line.

Martha was a good Christian woman and a good worker; knew how to do all kinds of work as well as a good gardener and good manager in every way. She knew how to dye wool, and cotton, and flax and how to card and spin and weave and knit and sew and embroider and applyqua and make nets (to catch fish with). She was a good fisherman, also. <text here moved to notes on Nicholas>

In the spring, Martha told the Tunnel girls that, if they would keep the house clean and do all the work in the house and take care of the children, she would spend all her time in making a good garden, while the men worked on the farm. They were willing, so they all went to work in great earnestness at their respective jobs, and Martha got her step sons to plow the garden and fix it ready to plant. Then she put the seeds in the beds and tended the garden. Through the winter, she would help with the work in the house, and in the summer she did the gardening and setting out trees and bushes and briars and flowers and did all the managing, as she was a good manager in every way. So it was year after year.

Marriage Notes for Nicholas Tunnell and Martha Jones:
From the Personal family account of Nicholas Money Tunnel:

(One script states that she was "very fair to look upon and very smart for work") He (Nicholas) talked with them and the brother-in-law said, "she is going to have to get married. I can't stand the expense – have no money". "Well," he (Nicholas) said, "I need a wife. Suppose you marry me. I have 160 acres and a new house on it all done but the flues. I don't know how to lay the arches." "Well, I know how", she said. "I helped build ours. All right," she said. "If you will give me and my children a home and be good to them, (another script records: "she needed a home for her 3 orphan children and he needed a mother for his children, and a housekeeper. He persuaded her and married her.") what better can I ask, and I will try to make a good mother for your children." So, they went to Jacksonville and got married. She went home with him and showed him how to lay the arch in the flues. I think Ma said she built the arch herself, then took her hankerchief and held it in front of the arch and let go of it. The wind sucked it right out at the top of the flue (smart woman).

When they became acquainted, they talked of their past, each with the other, and they liked each other and concluded they would get married and make a home for each other and their children. Three weeks before their marriage, Nicholas oldest daughter, Nancy, got married to Johnithon Watson. Three weeks after Nicholas marriage Suson Tunnel and James Farris got married. So, Martha went to live on a 160 acher farm before the house was quite finished and became the step mother of 8 girls and boys besides she had 3 of her own. They all got along fine and one could not of told but what the children were all brothers and sisters.

Notes for Sarah Gentry:

From Personal family account of Nicholas Money Tunnel:

When these children were nearly all grown and about grown – some of them, the mother took the collery (which in those days was a very dangerous and fattel desease). The Cholera had broke out in Kentucky and became an epedemic in that place in which they lived. She never told them she had it but kept away from the rest of them by staying out of doors, until she was nearly dead before they knew she had it. They all went 5 miles to church. They all stayed for night services. On one Sunday morning, she bade the children good bye as they started off for Sunday School. She sat on the step shading her eyes with her hand and watched them as long as she could see them. Then, she made her way into the house and laid down upon the bed.

Nicholus went to ask her what was the mater and if she were sick. She said I have the chollery and am going to die, and requested that he put the best quilt around her and buirry her, soon as she died, in a grave on their place and to burn flax, toe, and tar in the house, so none of the rest of them would take the dread desease. She died in a few minnuets after she had told him. He went to get someone to help him to buirrey his wife but could get no one to come, as everyone was so afraid they would not go near. He then got his dead wife's brother to come and stand away off and hold a lantern (after they had dug the grave), while he wraped her in the quilt, carried her to the grave, and placed her in it, and covered her up with dirt.

In those days, there were no churches where one could go to church and sit comfortabl through meeting, and Sunday School. They did not live close together as in these days, and they had Sunday School and meeting in the homes, and they would walk or go a horse back or in wagons and some went behind an ox team, and they went 5 miles or more and stayed for night services. So, it happened that the children of Sarrah (Gentry) Tunnel did not know that their Mother was dead and buierried untill they reached home, and their Father told them what had happened. He had burned flax and tar in the house and no one took the desease.

A neighbor had the cholary and she had gone to see him with out them knowing she went. As she went to see her brother, on the way back – she went in to see him (the neighbor). Nicholes warned her not to stop there but she did, but never told any of them. The Chollery spread in their neighborhood and became an epidemic, and grandfather (Nicholas) thought he would come to Illinois, as he heard it was a good farming country and that there was no cholery here. So he sold out and came to Illinois. They came in covered three covered wagons with their household goods - cows tied on behind – other stock and so forth and some a horseback.

According to my grandmother (Opal Ailene Baker):

Parents came from Germany (his parents spoke only German). He spoke german fairly fluently.

Supposedly Anna got in a fight with her mother in law (Charles' mom) and declared that no more german would be spoke in the house.

I, however, have been unable to find any evidence of this. From information gathered, both parents would have spoken English since several generations removed since immigration to America.
